CUBA'S NEXT STEPS

NAIT celebrates 15 years of building trades training in the Caribbean's largest country.

IN JANUARY, the world watched as barriers began to fall between Cuba and the biggest market in the Western world. More than 50 years after enacting trade embargoes against the Caribbean nation - the region's largest with more than 11 million people - the U.S. began to relax restrictions and rebuild relations. Unprecedented this side of the Atlantic, the event was likened to the fall of "Latin America's Berlin Wall" by one Colombian journalist.
